Project Description

USAID/Nicaragua supports innovative community advocacy on topics, such as gender equality, social inclusion, LGBTI, indigenous peoples and afro-descendants' issues, and people with disabilities. USAID programs also engage at-risk and marginalized youths and children to improve their access to traditional and vocational education, so that they can stay away from illicit organizations and activities. You will conduct desk research of appropriate resources (e.g. academic papers, indices, local and international news stories, blogs, social media) on a wide range of topics to create products, such as matrix, database, reports, briefing memos, and presentations, to help the Mission leadership make project and strategy decisions.
